New Conflict Summary

CONFIDENTIAL

The Bermuda Triangle

Ever since man sailed the Caribbean seas, the area known as the Bermuda Triangle has claimed hundreds of planes, ships and submarines. Even now, in an age of high-tech detection equipment, the area is still fearfully avoided by pilots, mariners and submariners.

Months ago, Jasper Chemicals Inc., as part of their on-going expansion program, bought the oceanic rights to CX 233 and began to set up mining operations in the area. But it was not long before an unaccountable and bizarre series of disasters occurred. An entire undersea research laboratory - Emeritus 243 - disappeared without a trace. Yesterday, news leaked out about the disappearance of a complete naval convoy: ConTol x34 - twelve cargo ships and support vessels. No wreckage or distress beacons have been located and no evidence was left behind to show what might have happened to the convoy and crew.

The Briefing

Jasper Chemicals has informed The Sword and Shield Society that it needs 20 top-level A1 grade mercenaries to investigate these major losses.

Additional Information

Rival petro-chem giant Entrophy Enterprises is apparently also interested in this area but has missed out on the oceanic rights. Security sources at Jasper suspect a possible involvement in, or knowledge of, these disasters.

The Mediterranean

You will have noticed, in the financial pages over the past few years, that a new corporate power has emerged and made itself known to the world: Baghdad Deep-Sea Mining. Not much is known about the inner workings of this new Iraqi-based corporation, but its quick rise to prominence in the industrial world suggests that it has some very sound, and probably governmental, financial backing.

Baghdad Deep-Sea Mining has concentrated its operations on the Mediterranean and, in the last few months, has increased its presence in and around the Straits of Gibraltar. The Straits are currently recognized as a 'sphere of influence' for American Hydro International, and the giant US conglomerate has now begun to take a serious interest in BDM's undersea activities.

The Briefing

American Hydro International wants full knowledge of BDM's hidden agenda. Their Italian office in Genoa has been put in charge of coordinating the operation and has declared it requires 50 A3 level freelancers for covert, stealth and defense operations.

Additional Information

Baghdad Deep-Sea Mining has invested heavily in all the latest technology.

Be prepared to face some superior corporate subs armed with the latest detection devices.

Rates of Pay

Standard rates (Contract DX-33 Pay) are in effect, but with added value Info Bonus scheme in place.

Four weeks basic guaranteed with extra work options for six months at HRR 125%

Additional Benefits

- Double value bonus scheme in operation

The North Cape

Despite decades of apparent success in the West, it's now readily accepted that "green" technology is at best a PR matter for most of the powerful corporations. In the current bleak economic climate, the need to have a job, feed the family and have somewhere to live is more important to most people. Countries which try to introduce environmental protection legislation that runs counter to the interests of the multinationals are soon cowed into submission by the simple threat of relocating factories and all-important jobs.

However, the old environmental groups still exist, albeit in a new, more militant guise. Most have gone 'underground' and vowed to fight for the future of the planet; persuasion by the gun rather than the word. Of these groups, one of the most pragmatically violent are the Earth Liberation Army, the military wing of the European All-Union Green Party; a trans-national coalition of fervent environmentalists. The big corporations are extremely unhappy with these groups and have tried to hunt down and destroy the ELA. In the last two months, ELA organizations in Russia and Scandinavia have been shattered by corporate units.

The Briefing

The ELA is now out for revenge. It's concentrating its activities in and around the Russo-Scandinavian area, particularly against United Foods VPK AB and the company-owned town of Murmansk Inc. For the first time, the ELA is hiring professionals - a total of 25 mercenaries - for its operations.

Additional Information

Rates of pay are low and the risks are great. Equipment provided is on the edge of obsolescence.
